Lewis And Miners Endorse Stevenson

2,800 Cheering Delegates To UMW Convention Give Unanimous Support To Demo Nominee

From Press Dispatches

CINCINNATI—The United Mine Workers Monday followed the lead of union President John L. Lewis in endorsing Democratic nominee Adlai Stevenson for election as president of the United States.

The vote of the delegates was unanimous.

Lewis told the 2,800 wild-cheering delegates that the choice in the national election was voting either for a "professional soldier" or "that humanitarian, Stevenson."

Lewis said, "that if the American people will march to the polls in November, Stevenson will march to the White House next January."

He denounced Gen. Eisenhower as a professional soldier who has led a life at the expense of the tax paying citizens and as one with no background of economic understanding of special things which affect the nation's economy.

Lewis lashed out at Ike as one trained to obey orders and to pass on commands. He called Ike's backers a "Country Club aristocracy" which would regiment the people and take away privileges for which the common people have fought through the years.

Wild Cheering
The delegates roared wildly when the resolution was put to a vote and only a few scattered "boos," but no actual "nays," were called.

The resolution indicated the union was basing its support on the Taft-Hartley law.

It cited Eisenhower's endorsement of the Republican platform retaining the controversial law and stated:

"Stevenson not only spoke out clearly and courageously for repeal of the law but pledged his administration would work for the welfare of the citizens of this nation."

Deep Sea Diving Interesting, But Can Be Dangerous

By MARILYN KIRKBY
Star Staff Writer

"We're always in way over our heads,"

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Palmer were not bawling the high cost of living when they made the above statement. The Palmers were merely trying to explain their profession, deep sea diving.

Palmer took his first dive into the briny deep "approximately 20 years ago."

While a high school student, Palmer heard a lecture given by Dr. William Beebe. That lecture decided him that zoology under the water was to be his career.

"Actually, I just wanted to see what happened to all the worms that I'd been losing as a result of fishing trips," Palmer said.

His wife, Lucie, has been diving "since the first week of our marriage 13 years ago."

The Palmers prefer scientific studies. Mrs. Palmer has perfected a method of oil painting under water to make on-the-spot drawings of life in the sea.

Palmer's specialty is photography. Probably the most exciting scene he filmed was the attack of a hungry barracuda upon one of the members of the diving crew.

"We were all wearing knives, mostly for effect, and when the barracuda came head on toward the young doctor, he pulled out his knife and stabbed the fish in the nose," Mrs. Palmer said.

"It's a wonderful life," say the Palmers. "The sea is the last unexplored part of the world—it is truly the last frontier."

Palmer believes that the sea will provide more and more of the world's resources and food supplies as science discovers more about the sea.

The deep sea divers, who spoke at the season's opening meeting of the Lincoln Dinner Club at the Cornhusker Hotel, are raising their own diving crew. Both their sons, 5 and 6 years old, have diving suits. Their daughter, 10, has made several dives.

Give States Tideland Title—Ike

Truman Administration Spells 'Shoddy Deal' To Dixie, General Asserts

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower stood before more than 15,000 Louisianians Monday night and stirred mighty roars of applause when he told them that, for the South, the Truman administration has been "the Shoddy Deal."

He asserted, as well, that the battle over tideland lands is a critical national issue which may next be extended to rivers and lakes all over the country.

The size and warmth of the reception here for the general has not been exceeded anywhere in his campaigning.

Reacts To Greeting
The New Orleans crowds exceeded by far the numbers who turned out to greet the Democratic candidate, Gov. Adlai Stevenson, according to residents of the city who saw both events. Stevenson spoke last Friday night from the same platform.

Eisenhower reacted to the warmth of the greeting. He seemed more self-assured and in better humor than in any previous speech.

When he mentioned Stevenson a storm of boos bounced and echoed off the walls of the Municipal Auditorium. They also booed references to President Truman.

While the speech was directed at the South, one point—the question of ownership of tideland land—was aimed at the whole country.

The battle over tidelands is, in fact, an entering wedge for government control of the resources in rivers and lakes, as well as in the sea, he said.

"If they take the Louisiana, Texas and California tidelands, then what about the Great Lakes?" he asked. "They have been held to be open sea. A good part of Chicago has been built on land once submerged by Lake Michigan."

"What of the inland lakes, rivers and streams in Oklahoma, Iowa, Illinois and Kansas?"

"What about the iron ore under navigable waters of Minnesota and the coal under the waters of Pennsylvania, West Virginia and other states?"

"What of the fisheries in Florida? What of the kelp in Maine? What of the real estate built on soil reclaimed on the once-submerged areas of New York and Massachusetts?"

Offers Five Reasons
Thus, while he touched the sensitive areas of states rights in the South, he posed the question of property ownership of tidelands to the nation as a whole. And he said: "I favor the recognition of clear legal titles to keep these lands in each of the 48 states."

Eisenhower gave five reasons for his attitude:

"1. I will always resist federal encroachment on rights and affairs of the state.

"2. I am gravely concerned over the threat to the states inherent in the growth of this power-hungry movement.

"3. The resources of these submerged areas, although still owned by the states, will be available to the nation as a whole.

"4. I believe that the sea will provide more and more of the world's resources and food supplies as science discovers more about the sea.

"5. I believe that the sea will provide more and more of the world's resources and food supplies as science discovers more about the sea."

Plot Against Iran Chief Is Crushed

TEHERAN, Iran (AP)—The Iranian government announced Monday it had quashed a foreign-aided plot against Premier Mohammed Mossadegh in the arrest of four men, one a retired general.

The government put a police guard around the home of Gen. Fazollah Zahedi, an outstanding Army officer and now a member of the Iranian Senate. Unofficial reports said he was the plotters' choice to replace Mossadegh in a planned coup d'etat. As a senator, Zahedi is immune from arrest.

In London, an official source said the British government, with expected American backing, had decided to reject Iran's demand for an immediate down payment of 20 million pounds ($6 million dollars) as a first step toward an oil settlement demanded by Mossadegh.

58% Of Dwellings Here Owner-Occupied

The census bureau reported Monday that 58 per cent of the dwelling units in Lincoln are occupied by their owners.

The report, according to the Associated Press, showed 17,811 owner-occupied dwelling units in Lincoln at the time of the 1950 census. A total of 12,872 were renter-occupied.

The average rent in Lincoln was $44.11, while the average value of one-dwelling-unit structures was $8,185.

Karl Witt, vice president of the Lincoln Home Builders, estimated that over 60 per cent of Lincoln's dwelling units will be owner-occupied by the end of 1952.

He also estimated that about 2,300 to 2,400 new units, built since 1950, would bring the city's total number of dwelling units to about 36,000.

The report said that between 1940 and 1950 the city had a 21.2 per cent increase in the number of all dwelling units.

The average cost of dwelling units currently being built is "somewhat upward" of the 1950 figures, Witt said. The average rental price now, he estimated, would be in the $50 level.

Omaha had 60 per cent of its dwelling units owner-occupied, representing 43,654 units, the Census Bureau report showed.

Rentals totaled 29,053. Average rent was $46.59.

In the 10-year period ending 1950, the number of dwelling units in Omaha increased 12.2 per cent. Average value of one-dwelling-unit structures was $8,474.

FREE TURKEY
Farmers Feted At Crete

The event was sponsored by the Crete Chamber of Commerce.

The banquet itself, a Thanksgiving dinner in advance consisted of turkey, celery dressing, mashed potatoes, giblet gravy, frozen peas, cranberry puree, rolls, pecan ice cream and coffee, was prepared by the Chamber Agricultural Committee. Committee members who worked all day Monday on the feast were H. C. Osterhout, chairman, Joe McGee, head cook, Frank Sand, Orville Lange, Paul Chelbourn, Russell Yank, Ernie Vlasak, Ray Nixon, Frank Liska and Ed Bauer.

'Food Shortage'
And while none of the group could scarcely imagine a food shortage after that meal, they were told of such a possibility by Chancellor R. G. Gustavson of the University of Nebraska.

The chancellor told the group that if the population growth in the United States continues at the present rate, there will be 190 million people in this country in 1975.

Even with the best use of farmland and fertilizer, said Gustavson, food production cannot be increased more than 65 per cent by 1975. That would take care of the growth in this country, he said, but not the growth in the world.

In the years ahead, he said, the problems of food supply will mean more research on grasses and fertilizer. That problem, said Gustavson, will also mean the possible use of new kinds of food such as yeast and chlorella, a good and quickly grown plant.

Acting chairman at the dinner was Dale Alter, Chamber president. C. C. Lillibridge was master of ceremonies. The welcome to the farmers was given by Mayor Fred Kerst and the response for the farmers by Ed Mundt who farms east of Crete. Music was furnished by Matt Richards and the Kramer Lutheran Churchmen's chorus.

U.N. Debate On Korea To Come After U.S. Elections

... Acheson Seizes Initiative In Assembly

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (INS)—The Western powers tentatively agreed Monday to postpone until after the U. S. elections any major debate on Korea in the U. N. Assembly opening in New York Tuesday.

The move was reflected in the provisional agenda of the all-important Political Committee. The agenda puts Korea third — after the highly controversial questions of collective security and disarmament — thus insuring that the problem of Korea will not be raised before mid-November.

Secretary of State Acheson made two swift moves to seize the initiative in the Assembly. He assigned himself as first speaker in the general debate slated for Wednesday morning. He then summoned the entire American U.N. delegation for a strategy conference and outlined the final draft of his bid for a Korean peace.

Some 1,000 delegates from 60 countries poured into New York to participate in the seventh annual session which will be touched off at 10 a. m. (CST) Tuesday at a ceremony opening the ornate and domed Assembly Auditorium. The auditorium forms the base of the 39-story glass and marble administration building on the permanent U.N. headquarters site.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky, accompanied by Andrei Gromyko and some 90 Russian assistants, arrived on the liner Queen Elizabeth and foreshadowed the Kremlin's coming demand in U.N. for the withdrawal of foreign troops from Korea.

In reply to a question about Gen. Eisenhower's statements that American troops should be replaced in Korea increasingly by South Koreans, Vishinsky said: "American troops should not be in Korea. They should not have come to Korea."

Advance indications among Iron Curtain sources offer small hope for concrete Soviet moves to break the stalemate Panmunjom truce talks—such as the Kremlin urging Red China to accept the voluntary repatriation principle of war prisoners.

It is a foregone conclusion that Vishinsky has in his pocket extensive plans for bombarding the West in the U.N. with:

- 1—Propaganda-coated "peace" demands.
- 2—Charges that U. S. troops in Korea are using germ warfare.
- 3—Communist schemes for disarmament and the abolition of atom weapons; and
- 4—Demands for the withdrawal of American troops from Europe and Japan.

Adlai Takes Reds' Threat Lightly—Nixon

NEW YORK (P)—Senator Richard M. Nixon, Republican vice presidential candidate, said Monday night that Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson's views on Communism in government had "disqualified him from leading" the United States.

In a nationwide television and radio appearance, the California senator reviewed Stevenson's character deposition for Alger Hiss, former State Department official who was convicted of perjury after he denied he gave government secrets to a Russian spy ring.

Nixon said the Democratic presidential candidate erred in four ways in the Hiss case:

- "It (the deposition) was voluntary . . .
- "It was given after" Whittaker Chambers, Hiss' accuser, had confronted him with the charges and after Chambers had produced papers he said supported his charges.
- "It was given when he (Stevenson) was governor of Illinois" and carried his prestige into the case on the side of Hiss.
- "He has never expressed any indignation over what Hiss has done . . ."

Ike Won't Get Blind Following Sparkman

PEORIA, Ill. (P)—Sen. John Sparkman, Democratic candidate for vice president, said Monday night he doubts the people will follow Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower "blindly in future crusades."

Referring to Eisenhower's campaign, the Alabama Senator said Americans "will not stomach a crusade joined in by the McCathys, Jenners and all the Republicans who stand for reaction instead of progress."

"They will not join a crusade based on fear rather than on the faith of the future. They will not join a crusade led by a captive candidate flanked by demolitionists and hatchet men."

Sparkman addressed a $10 plate fund raising dinner in behalf of John McNaughton of Peoria, candidate for the Congressional seat held by Republican Harold Velde of Peoria.

That tour will begin in Illinois and wind up there with an election eve speech in Chicago, Nov. 3.

He labeled GOP claims of gains in the Midwest and the West as "either October optimism or campaign oratory."

Wyatt called the news conference to announce details of Stevenson's campaign—ending whistle-stop train campaign through the East, starting Oct. 21. Stevenson will stump through 12 states during the two-week junket.

Stevenson starts his second invasion of the West Tuesday morning when he flies to Casper, Wyo. He will make a major speech Tuesday night in Salt Lake City before swinging on into Washington, Oregon and California.

He will wind up that five-day trip with four stops in Texas—Fort Worth, Dallas, Houston and San Antonio.

"4. The orderly development of these resources under the states need not interfere with any valid federal function."

"5. I believe the law twice passed by Congress which would recognize these state titles is in keeping with basic principles of honest dealing and fair play."

This was Eisenhower's fourth foray into the South. More than a month ago, he swept through Georgia, Florida, and Alabama. His next trip took him to Richmond, Va. Preceding the present trip, he went to Columbia, S. C.

He has made the most concerted effort of any Republican presidential candidate to smash into the Democratic citadel in the solid South.

Monday night's speech was the crowning attack of his whole attempt.

GEN. SMITH DEFENDS TRUMAN — Gen. Walter Bedell Smith (right), head of the Central Intelligence Agency, talks to Rep. Francis E. Walter (D-Pa.) after Smith told a House Un-American Activities Committee that American people "have little to worry about" if the next President "does as well as President Truman" in fighting Communism in the federal government. Smith told the committee he was "morally certain that there may be Communists in the Central Intelligence Agency." (AP Wirephoto Monday Night.)

Jobless Veteran Program To Be Handled By State

Nebraska will have full jurisdiction in administration of the new veterans unemployment insurance program for post-Korea servicemen in this state, when the new law becomes effective Wednesday.

Donald P. Miller, state labor commissioner, said complete administration by the state was by agreement with the U.S. Department of Labor.

The new Veterans Readjustment Assistance Act applies to any veteran with a discharge other than dishonorable who had some services with the armed forces after June 26, 1950.

The veteran must have at least 90 days of consecutive service or have been released for a service-incurred disability and injury. The mustering-out pay period must have expired.

To qualify, the jobless veterans must be able to work and available for work, must report regularly to the State Employment Service as directed, and must conform to all other eligibility rules under the Nebraska unemployment law.

Unemployment benefits are $26 weekly for 26 weeks, or a total of $676. However, the veteran must first exhaust benefits to which he may be entitled under state law. If these benefits are less than $26, the federal government will make up the difference and charge it against the maximum federal benefit of $676.

If the veteran exhausts all his state benefits before he finds employment, he may apply for his federal allowance. Payments are not provided for self-employed veterans.

Veterans may contact the State Employment Service for full information and details.

Truman's Red Attack Is Praised

U.S. Intelligence Chief Hopes Successor Will Do As Well As HST

PHILADELPHIA (P)—Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, head of the Central Intelligence Agency, said Monday he believes President Truman is doing a good job in fighting communism in the federal government.

The 57-year-old former ambassador to Russia said that if the next president, either Democrat Adlai Stevenson or Republican Dwight Eisenhower, "does as well" the American people "will have little to worry about."

Smith offered the statement during testimony at an open hearing of the House Un-American Activities Committee which began a week-long session here into Communist activities in the Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware areas.

Called To Explain
The general was summoned by the committee to explain his Sept. 29 statement in which he said he believed Communists "are so adroit and adept they have infiltrated every security agency of the government."

He admitted his earlier statement had been "predicated on pure theory and past performance" but insisted that he would be "extremely complacent if he believed that there was no Communist infiltration in the government."

He told the four House members — Chairman John S. Wood (D-Ga.), Francis E. Walter (D-Pa.), Harold Velde (R-Ill.) and Clyde Doyle (D-Calif.)—that he was "morally certain" there were Communists in the CIA. The agency is a top-secret spy group that confines all its operations in countries outside the U. S.

No Penetration Found
Smith, pressed by Walter, said he did not know the identity of any Communists in his organization, then elaborated:

"I have found no penetration of Communists in my organization in the United States; no American Communists and none within the scope of this committee."

"I believe that there are Communists in my organization outside of the United States because in the past we have from time to time discovered one or two in our ranks."

McKnight Tells Of Amendment Ballot Issues

A former state legislator, John McKnight of Auburn believes it is more important to discuss issues of the six state constitutional amendments on the November ballot than what Nixon did with his contribution funds.

"So very often," he pointed out, "constitutional amendments have failed because of lack of interest."

Speaking to 125 members of the Lancaster County Bar Association at the Cornhusker hotel Monday night, McKnight declared that "you don't get a clarification of the issues by reading the ballot."

He cited the amendment 306 on the ballot concerning election of a state board "resembling the local board of education" and appointment of an executive by the board as the "most important" amendment.

Regarding the amendment allowing auto taxes to be paid at the time license plates are bought, McKnight said that it would eliminate one-half a million transactions involving a "great deal of labor and bookkeeping."

The former state senator supported the amendment increasing pay of legislators saying "believe me they earn it."

Nebraska Group Busy In NY Interviewing Business Heads

Reaction to the special Nebraska supplement in the New York Times was "greater than anticipated," Wayne Dawson, industrial manager for the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce, said Monday following his return from New York City.

"We were busy with appointments and phone calls from morning to night. I extended my stay to a full week; Mr. Price will remain two more weeks."

C. V. Price, director of the Nebraska Resources Foundation, headed the six-man group which arrived in New York on the supplement's publication date, Oct. 5, to answer inquiries and interview representatives of industrial firms interested in locating in Nebraska.

Response Great

The delegation also included Howard Shinrock, Omaha Chamber industrial manager; Joe Poynter, Kearney banker; Harris Osterburg, Norfolk Chamber manager; and Hogan Trammell, Plattsmouth Chamber manager. These men also returned home last Friday and Saturday.

The New York Times told the group that over 1,000 copies of the supplement had been mailed to requests by Wednesday.

"The response was overwhelming; we had appointments for as late as 8 o'clock at night," Dawson said.

Questions in order of interest and frequency, according to Dawson, concerned schools, then housing, taxes, facilities for manufacturing, rental costs, and recreation.

Community Life

A surprising number of "retired individuals or persons with independent income" inquired community life in Nebraska.

Most industrial representatives were surprised that "so few people lived in such a large amount of space."

While there is the idea of decentralization of industry, there was no indication that a complete firm might re-locate in the state, Dawson said.

Two considerations seemed ap-

LANDER, Wyo. (P)—Seven persons were hospitalized Monday and scores of others were taken ill with what doctors said was a form of "ptomaine poisoning" following a Republican rally northwest of Riverton Sunday.

Some 2,500 persons attended the rally and listened to Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R-Wis.), Gov. Frank A. Barrett and Rep. William Henry Harrison (R-Wyo.) Most of those stricken—officially estimated at about 200—were affected three to eight hours after the baked ham dinner.

parent in the East's congested labor-industry situation. First, "families are looking for decent living conditions," and second, "industry hopes to stabilize its labor."

Taxes

Where many small firms occupy one building it's very easy for employees to change jobs merely by walking next door, Dawson explained.

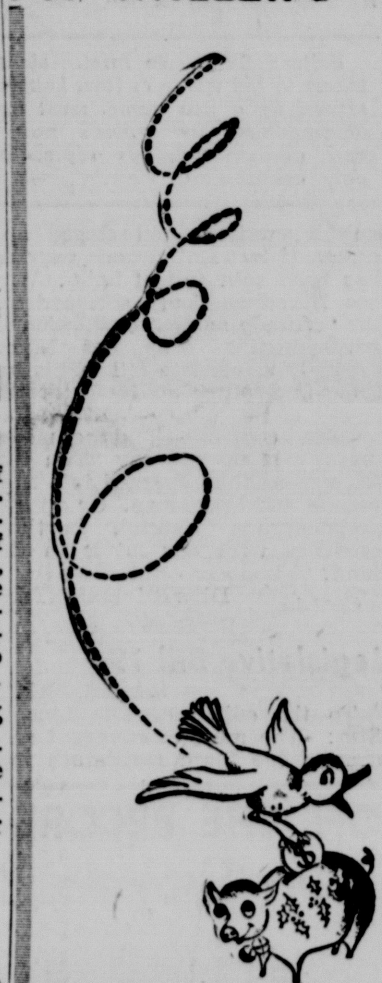

Although a few representatives asked about "tax concessions," they had a favorable attitude toward our reply, Dawson said. "We told them although Nebraska was seeking to balance an agricultural economy with industry, the industry sought would be a part of the community and as such a member would be expected to pay its proportionate tax share."

Only about half of the inquiring industries would require the facilities of Omaha or Lincoln, Dawson said. All others were referred to representatives of other Nebraska communities.

He said he couldn't estimate the number of inquiring firms. Most will need a survey for their individual requirements.

But there is "widespread interest" in Nebraska, he concluded. A New York attorney, who was Dawson's airline seat partner as far as Chicago, had a copy of the supplement in his brief case.

All This And More Too

In virtually every county of the western half of Nebraska there is real apprehension out on the farm over the prolonged absence of moisture. Bad as it is the situation is not as bad as in western Kansas, we are told. There reports suggest that thousands of acres of land normally devoted to the production of wheat will not be planted because of drought.

The time has come to talk a little bit about Nebraska, particularly its contribution in the last decade to the food supplies of the hungry world. This crop season of 1952 is no exception to Nebraska's accomplishments from 1941 on through a decade of great progress. The 1952 wheat crop was the largest in Nebraska's history. The 1952 corn crop ranked fourth in 85 years of statehood. Rarely in this state are there bumper crops of both wheat and corn. And, in addition other small grains, hay, sugar beets, and dairying and poultry raising contributed generously to farm income. In an agricultural state that is the story which warms hearts and sends spirits soaring. It is the answer to the creative spirit so characteristic of a people living close to the soil. For more than ten years now they have produced not only enough for their own needs but vast quantities of grains, livestock and other food products to satisfy the hunger of millions and millions of people beyond their borders. One of the most effective factors in the world struggle against Communism is food for hungry masses.

We may have reached the point where we take too much for granted. A year ago we sat on the fringes of a destructive drought. Again in 1952 we saw that drought strike savagely against larger areas of the United States. It is this, coupled with the knowledge that west of the Missouri old Mother Nature is fickle, that creators at this time a certain measure of apprehension. We have enjoyed abundant harvests to such a uniform degree for more than a decade that perhaps we have forgotten the importance of water, that is water for irrigation, and the part that irrigation plays in a stable agriculture in the region which lies to the west of the Missouri.

Over in Iowa last week Sen. Bob Taft of Ohio in frivolous spirit wise-cracked "that you would think the Democrats invented a prosperous agriculture." Senator Taft, whose farming apparently has been limited to the streets of Cincinnati, seems to know only well-watered Ohio. Ohio is not concerned with irrigation. The storage of water for thirsty fields and expansion of irrigation are not important to farm production there.

Sen. Taft may have been joking but to the millions who live west of the Missouri River there is nothing funny in a wisecrack which chooses to ignore the remarkable progress in the last 15 years resulting from the comprehensive program of the conservation of natural resources. We employ better farming methods in this country to the west of the Missouri today—improved methods of preparing the soil for the seed, improved seed, better care of the soil, a farming technique which retains in the land itself all of the raindrops that can be held back. The Taft weakness is not so much a lack of purpose as it is a lack of understanding. Bob Taft is wholly honest in his views. His trouble is that he does not realize each growing season in this part of the American midlands is a life and death struggle between drought, destructive floods, between abundance and scarcity, between a prosperous agriculture and a bankrupt agriculture. Sen. Taft has never been distinguished for his contribution to agriculture.

Nebraska's farmers are apprehensive at this time, and with good reason. They know there is a time for rain and a time for sunshine. They know that if the fall is unfavorable that the wheat which should go in the ground either will fail to germinate or if it does the hazards of winter killing are increased enormously. Out here we live by the plow. Out here Mr. Taft's Republican associates know the importance of a continuing program of the conservation of the natural resources. Out here if anything a stepped up program of soil conservation, the building of great dams to impound the waters of the rivers, and the expansion of irrigation spell the difference between prosperity and rural poverty. Out here solid support of the prices for farm commodities is a must—not a maybe.

Sen. Taft may strengthen the Republicans with the Old Guard but he cannot contribute to the peace of mind of any intelligent farmer who notes day after day a continuing drought situation spreading itself over a wide section of the country to the west of the Missouri. We know of no Nebraskan who at any time chooses to ignore the part which nature plays in the lives of people or to claim credit for that which only nature herself contributes. We know a lot of people though who believe in working with nature in her gentle and harsh moods and in the latter instance doing everything within man's power to offset the harshness.

Let Justice Be Done

The mills of justice grind slowly but inexorably in this country. In Washington Monday the United States Supreme Court in effect upheld the death sentence convictions of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg on charges they stole American atomic secrets for Russia.

The high court, according to the news columns, refused to review the lower court convictions, thus dooming the Rosenbergs to death in the electric chair unless they appeal successfully for executive clemency or new legal moves are started in the lower courts. The Rosenbergs have been all but forgotten by the American people. They were picked up by the FBI agents, along with two others, one the charge they were members of a spy ring. One of the two is now serving a fifteen year sentence, the other man thirty years for spy activities dating back to 1944.

We are impatient in this country. We resent the slowness of the law.

Yet the great glory of America's system of justice is the fact that every reasonable safeguard has been constructed to protect the individual. Our present peril grows out of the hysteria which frequently has characterized the struggle against Communism. We can depend upon the American courts. We can rely upon the law, seemingly slow as it is at times to achieve justice. It is in the orderly processes of law that American security is preserved.

This Game Of Football

These week end fall afternoons have their compensations.

There is no finer spectacle in America than the friendly, gay colorful crowds which gather for high school and intercollegiate football games. For a brief time the game is the thing, and millions of enthusiastic football fans who fill the huge stadiums forget their daily burdens.

That is good.

We doubt that all of the thousands who filled the Nebraska stadium last Saturday were happy with what they saw. Football is a rugged game but there were too many injuries — too many young men carted off the field on stretchers, obviously too much ill feeling. It cannot be otherwise when there is so much emphasis on winning. There was no less respect for a victory-studded season twenty or thirty years ago but one does not need to be an expert to appreciate the great change that has come in intercollegiate football. It is played for keeps today. The institution that fails to go along finds itself hopelessly out of the select circle. That is what the heads of numbers of universities had in mind when they directed attention to the constantly increasing emphasis placed upon winning football squads.

In bright contrast was that brilliant spectacle in between halves when hundreds of musicians representing high school bands paraded the field in between halves. Music, 'tis said, has power to soothe the savage breast but it filled the air last Saturday with appreciable effect. Football is a game—a great game.

Let's keep it that way.

Zooming Down The Roller Coaster

Cinera, the movie industry's answer to television, made its official and formal bow to the public last week, and first reactions by viewers were enthusiastic. The new motion picture process which gives a new depth and sweep to movies was unveiled in New York, and one person present said he actually felt as if he were on a roller coaster when a cinera of a roller coaster was flashed on the screen.

The cinera screen is approximately six times larger than the conventional movie screen, and three projectors are operated at the same time. The middle projector shoots on to the center of the screen, the right-hand projector throws on the left side, and the left-hand projector fills in the right side. Three separate cameras are used in the filming to provide the dramatic effect, and the sound tracks are recorded at seven different points to bring about perfect synchronization.

The cinera was developed during the war when a technician was seeking a device that would simulate the visual and auditory experiences of a man in battle. Now that it has been developed sufficiently to become a commercial asset, the cinera will be used by the hard-pressed movie men in their "war" on television.

It is too early to tell whether the cinera, providing a completely new type of audio-visual experience, will compete successfully with television for the interest of viewers. One big drawback is the fact that an unusually large stage and screen are required for projection of cinera. But the premier of this new technique may prove to be as significant as one held 25 years ago last week in another New York theater, when the first talking picture was shown to the public.

Sen. Sparkman Merits Title Of 'Honest John'

WASHINGTON Having focused some attention on the finances of Sen. Nixon, the GOP vice presidential candidate, here is a report on the finances of the Democratic vice presidential candidate.

In 1942, Sen. John J. Sparkman of Alabama, then a member of the House of Representatives, telephoned this column to say:

"You have been writing up members of Congress who put their wives on the payroll. I've never had Mrs. Sparkman on my payroll yet, but I'm about to put her on. She's going to be a real working member of the staff, and anytime you drop around to the office, you'll find her there. If that's a story make the most of it."

This column has frequently called attention to relatives of Congressmen carried on the public payroll who merely draw a salary but do not work. Likewise this column has been careful to point to family members who performed real jobs for Congressmen—among them Mrs. Irving Ives, wife of the Republican Senator from New York, who works in his office and works hard.

Another was Arthur Vandenberg Jr., son of the late Republican Senator from Michigan. It would have been difficult for Sen. Vandenberg to have accomplished what he did without his son's help. Likewise Vice President Jack Garner kept his wife on the payroll—and she earned every penny she got.

However, in keeping with the heavy policy of dissecting the financial affairs of candidates, here is a scrutiny of Sen. Sparkman's income.

His income taxes, already made public for the past eight years, show that in 1944 he grossed $9,453.52 before taxes. This climbed to $13,005.47 in 1951, and the average income was around $11,000—all before taxes. Against this Sparkman paid an average tax of $2,300 a year.

The Senator's income, chiefly his congressional salary, was augmented by rent of a $75 month on a six-room bungalow in Huntsville, Ala., plus rent of $400 a year on the 160-acre farm near Huntsville.

During his 16 years in Congress he has made a total of $2,000 on lecture fees and $950 from two magazine articles. His wife receives a base salary of $4,500, which with overtime comes to around $6,500. She is also a 49 per cent owner of Radio Station WAVU at Albertville, Ala. The other owner being the husband of the Senator's niece.

Sen. Sparkman's capital investments include: $50,000 in life insurance; about $20,000 in government bonds; about $10,000 in investment certificates; $675 of stock in a vending-machine company that sells insurance at airports; and a $35,000 home in Washington.

Sparkman bought his Washington home in 1947, paying $15,000 in cash, by converting government bonds. He took a mortgage of $20,000, of which about one-half has been paid off.

Sparkman began life as the son of a tenant farmer in Alabama, and it was always his ambition to own a farm. He now owns what he describes as a rather run-down farm, but says he is trying to build it up.

The senator has a savings account in Huntsville, Ala., of $3,000 and a checking account in Washington of about $1,000 plus a 1950 Buick and a 1946 Chevrolet.

Asked whether he found it difficult to live on a senator's income, Sparkman replied: "It isn't easy, but you can do it all right, and I know plenty of members of Congress who do."

"I made it a practice to save 10 per cent of my income every year, and while I don't always do it, I usually come pretty close."

He sets aside $50 every month for government bonds.

On June 1, 1946, this column, in reporting how Sen. Thomas of Oklahoma and Bankhead of Alabama had speculated in the cotton market on the basis of government information, also reported the following under the heading "Honest John Sparkman."

"Lunching with friends, House Majority Whip John Sparkman was discussing the question of campaign aid to members of Congress. Sparkman mentioned several instances where he had turned down offers of money from constituents whom he had helped in Washington and who wanted to contribute to his campaign fund as a return favor."

"On one occasion, Sparkman said, he studied his bank statement and thought he discovered an error of $500 in his favor. Upon querying the bank, he learned that a constituent had deposited the $500 to Sparkman's account. The constituent had introduced a bill by which the constituent was paid $5,000 damages when an Army truck killed a member of the constituent's family."

"Sparkman wrote the bank that prosecution of the claim was his duty as a member of Congress, and explained that he could not accept the $500 for simply doing the job which he had been elected. He sent a copy to his would-be benefactor, with a personal note of thanks."

"The bank transferred the $500 back to the account of the constituent and sent Sparkman a new statement. Scrawled across the new statement in bold letters was this comment: 'Diogenes, put out your lamp!'"

This column was dated June 1, 1946, long before Sparkman was ever considered for the vice presidency.

MARQUIS CHILDS

Presidential Campaign Too Long And Arduous

WASHINGTON—On one thing both presidential candidates must at the midpoint of this increasingly bitter campaign heartily and completely agree. That is that the campaign goes on much too long and, in its mounting demands, puts an almost intolerable burden on the two principals and the men immediately around them.

To test their braves and discover good material for chieftains, certain American Indian tribes set up a course which contestants were required to run while the elders stood by with club and stone to make the going tougher. The presidential campaign is the modern equivalent of this primitive running of the gamut.

It subjects the candidates, one of whom must soon take up the impossible burden of the presidency, to serious physical strain. The current campaign has gone on longer than most and the demands in this era of television are much greater.

At the end of a long day in a motorcade or on the campaign train, with frequent stops and a half dozen talks, the candidate must in the evening face the television audience. He is aware that from $50,000 to $60,000 is being spent for the network that in millions of homes across the country his manner, his air of confidence or the lack of it, his physical demeanor are being closely scrutinized.

You hear the judgments the next day—he seemed tired, he didn't seem to have his heart in it. Small wonder. There must be steam in the boiler — a sufficient degree of physical energy — to put over a speech whether in a crowded hall or in the quiet of a TV studio.

Campaigning by train is in some respects worse than by plane, although it is probably a tossup. Traveling by plane, the candidate and his party must get up at an unearthly hour to make a schedule that calls for arrival in a distant city at a strategic time when the crowds can be turned out. But at least on a plane the candidate can escape for a while from politicians.

On the train, or even in a motorcade, he is never allowed to be alone. Different sets of people get on at each stop and all want the ear of the great man even if only a few minutes. At one of Gen. Eisenhower's evening receptions before a big speech it was arranged for top local Republican ladies to shake hands with him, each handshake separately recorded by a photographer. Local committees are forever ringing in such stunts,

Talking informally in the midst of the Nixon episode, Eisenhower is reported to have said: "If I never see another human being again it will be too soon."

There is some reason to believe that the voting public, too, is getting fed up as the talkathon goes on week after week. Small turnouts were reported for Eisenhower in Salt Lake City and for Gov. Stevenson in New Orleans. One of the latest surveys made for the Eisenhower strategists is said to have shown that only between 10 to 11 per cent of the potential audience is listening to the speeches of the two presidential candidates, and this percentage would naturally be much smaller for the lesser fry.

The theory is that the prolonged campaign is helping Stevenson, a comparative unknown, to put himself and his ideas across. He needs, so the reason goes, all the time he can get. But it is a dubious theory since the span of political attention in this country is short.

Both men seem to have survived fairly well. A personal doctor and a massur watch over Eisenhower's health on the campaign train. At the start it was feared that his voice might not stand up under such a prolonged and unaccustomed strain. As in the instance of Wendell Willkie, Eisenhower has a natural outgoing friendliness and he cannot be restrained from talking even when only two or three are gathered together.

Surely some basic changes should be undertaken before another four years go by. With the increasing use of television the campaign can be greatly shortened. The two political conventions should be held in the first and second weeks of September. The campaigning could then start around the first of October. This would leave about five weeks for an intensive effort, and surely that is long enough.

What is sometimes forgotten in the heat of battle is that either Dwight Eisenhower or Adlai Stevenson will in a few weeks face some fearful decisions. Theoretically there will be an interval for recuperation between Nov. 5 and Jan. 20.

But unless the successful candidate and next President retires to some remote mountain fastness, and where that would be short of the Himalayas it is hard to say, he will be besieged by all kinds and conditions of office-seekers and policy-framers. They will bend his ear and thrust their arm for a thousand and one purposes. For the victor, a new ordeal will begin almost before the other one has ended.

NEBRASKANS: In The Workshop And At Home

One Who Fights The Dread Crippler—Polio

By ROY CAMPBELL
Star Staff Writer

Morris Siegel looks, acts, talks and generally thinks like almost any other individual. He conducts his business in a quiet and unassuming manner. On rainy days, he wears a raincoat and galoshes, just like anybody else.

In stature, he appears Napoleonic, and like the once-mighty emperor, he stands straight-backed and square-jawed. But, unlike Napoleon, Siegel early in his life set out to conquer a threat, not manufacture one.

In this frame of mind, Siegel began work in 1938 for the cause of fighting polio. His interest at that time was both personal and general. Sixteen or 17 years ago, he explains, his son was taken ill with polio symptoms. As fortune decreed, the infection wasn't serious and the effects were negligible. But the fear struck in Siegel's heart left a permanent mark. Today, he explains in his own modest manner, his interest in polio is deep and heartfelt.

Siegel's work in fighting the dread crippler of children and men has brought praise from medical and lay people throughout not only the county and eastern section of the state, but the nation as well. During the past season's killing and crippling epidemic, Siegel was known in both spirit and person.

As chairman of the Lancaster County Chapter of Infantile Paralysis, Siegel, who for many days forgot the meaning of sleep, kept a steady vigil on every patient entering a Lincoln hospital. During the peak of the epidemic, polio patients numbered close to 400.

The emotional crises daily confronted would have crushed less stalwart individuals.

"Every day I came out of the wards," Morris recalls, "I came out mentally sick. I'm human, and haven't been hardened by the tragedies of life. I'm no different from anybody else, and that's why it hits home."

But working in the fight against polio has had compensations: "It's a heart-warming thing to see the appreciation in the eyes of a patient when he knows that you — a stranger — are there to help him at any time. That's where you get the personal satisfaction out of helping someone."

... in the words, the tragedies hit home ...

At times, the balance has tipped heavily against the compensations in his work.

"A person cannot understand this thing," Siegel says, "until he sees the suffering, the effects; until he sees a dear friend fight for his life."

On occasion during the fight to save lives and keep the paralysis of polio at a minimum, Siegel's call for help has sounded literally across the nation. Air Force planes have flown in iron lungs for standby service; nurses worked two shifts when shortages were acute; additional funds were immediately made available from the National Foundation when the crisis in the county reached its peak.

"There was no time during the epidemic," Siegel says, "when a patient lacked a single item of care or equipment."

Looking toward the future, the tireless fighter against polio sees hope for a cure and the day when polio will be no more. He points out that "today we have iron lungs and medical and technical help, regardless of race, creed or color."

"In our experience," Morris says, "there has never been anyone who has asked for assistance when he didn't need it."

But when the need did arise, Siegel, receiving only the compensation of knowing he was helping his fellow man, was there with a personal word, a personal hand, to combat the fear of the crippler.

The People Speak

Let 'Em Slug It Out

Lincoln, Neb.

To the editor of The Lincoln Star: I think Mr. Truman is making a mistake running all over the country campaigning for Gov. Stevenson at the expense of the taxpayers. He refused to run again for President and endorsed Gov. Stevenson, who is plenty able to conduct his own campaign with the help of Sen. Sparkman, and to defend the Truman administration.

If, as Mr. Truman maintains, he has given the American people a good and faithful administration, then his conscience should be clear and the criticism against him need not hurt him. Now he should stay in Washington, tending to his business until the end of his term when he can retire and rest on his laurels.

Let Eisenhower and Stevenson slug it out and when election day comes, the people will decide whom they want for President and vice president. To me, it is a sorry spectacle to see our President leave his work and run all over the country, blasting the opposite party. The head of a Christian nation should set a better example to the other nations of the world.

C. J. JOHNSON

Editor's Note: The taxpayers are not footing the expense of the Truman "whistle-stop" campaign. The Democratic National Committee is paying the bill.

The Modern Bible

Ainsworth, Neb.

To the editor of The Lincoln Star: Since no reply has appeared to John T. Peck's confused letter about "The Modern Bible" (Which he obviously has not read) and others may be blinded by the same errors, let me say that "the good old Bible of Grandma's day" was itself a translation, some of it in obsolete terms, from imperfect and incomplete copies of earlier manuscripts; that the new Authorized Revised Standard Version, both because of better prepared scholars and of their possession of earlier and more complete manuscripts from which to translate, is more faithful to the original Scriptures and more understandable to our generation.

Had any copy of the "Book of books" "in existence long before Luther" fallen into Mr. Peck's hands, not only would it have been a more accurate expression of "the faith once delivered to the faithful," but he would have been able to read a single line of it, so that for him and most others divine revelation would have been frustrated. Neither was there, even in manuscript, any collected old family Bible "for nearly 2000 years." In fact, any who refuse to read and study this most perfect new translation are resisting God's effort to reveal Himself. Fortunately, not many are so stubbornly blind. For every one who did or would look into "the old, heavy, gilt-edged Bible of Grandma's day" (and I was one), a thousand will pick up this easily-handled better translation in clear and beautiful English, and may find there the Way of life for the redemption of sinful humanity.

CARL G. BADER

Nixon Spectacle

Blair, Neb.

To the editor of The Lincoln Star: The Nixon TV spectacle is just one in a long, continuing stream of known events and happenings which point up the appalling need of an overhauling of our general education system in this nation. People with inadequate educational training are almost completely the victims of their emotions.

The effrontery of this man Nixon. Since his soapbox fiasco

The Critic Makes Peace

All is well once again along Washington's music row, where the critic who once criticized Margaret's singing has said some very nice things not only about Margaret but about her daddy, President Truman.

Paul Hume, the Washington Post critic who termed Margaret's singing "flat" and received a letter bursting with indignation from Mr. Truman, said this week that Mr. Truman is the "most musical President in our history." He even thought the White House piano was being rather well played.

Whether the President will reply to this latest critical observation is still in doubt. Perhaps Mr. Hume, who was castigated in no uncertain terms by an irate father, might even get an invitation to the White House—with a piano performance after dinner.

Truman Ready For Three-Day Slam-Bang Foray Into Northeast

Tuesday, October 14, 1952 THE LINCOLN STAR 5

30 Speeches Planned In Five States

WASHINGTON (AP) — New stress on labor and civil rights issues was forecast Monday as President Truman prepared to renew his campaign outgunning against Republicans on a three-day foray into the Northeast.

The train and motorcade itinerary, announced Monday, calls for more than 30 speeches, starting Thursday, in heavily industrialized areas of New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Rhode Island.

The five states have at stake 77 electoral votes—some of them apparently on the political fence—plus some critical congressional contests.

Even More Concentrated

Truman's campaign schedule for the new trip is even more concentrated than for his 8,500-mile cross-country swing completed Sunday.

The 68-year-old President will average more than 10 speeches a day in his new pour-it-on effort to boost Gov. Adlai Stevenson into the White House.

He spoke 90 times in 15 days in his first big campaign attempt, as he put it, to rub some of the tinsel and glamor off Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, the Republican candidate.

Confidence Is Evident

The intensity of the President's new campaign tour—plus plans for a swing through Pennsylvania and the Midwest almost up to election day—indicated the Democratic high command has confidence that Truman, an old pro at politics, is winning votes. Some Republicans have been saying Truman is doing the Democratic party more harm than good.

As speech writers went to work on material for this week's trip, talk at the White House was that the President could be expected to stress labor and civil rights issues to his New England audiences.

In his new venture Truman will mix a lot of motorcade campaigning with his traditional whistle-stop blasts at the GOP from the rear platform of his train.

His first hit song was "Mama's Little Coal Black Rose." Others were "Sleepytime Gal," "Til We Meet Again," "Japanese Sandman," "Ain't We Got Fun," and "Some Sunday Morning."

DEMOCRATS

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia. (INS)—A political controversy reached the boiling point Monday over Sen. John Sparkman's denials of statements he reportedly made in a speech at Council Bluffs last Friday.

The Democratic vice-presidential candidate had stated that House un-American Activities Committee files would show more cases of Communist and Communist-Front affiliations at Columbia University.

Sparkman Stirs Debate

University of Iowa President, then from any other institution in the country.

Sparkman, traveling in Illinois Monday, declared in a telegram released through the "Volunteers for Stevenson on the Columbia University Faculties and Staff": "I have never at any time said that anyone connected with Columbia University was a Communist or a fellow-traveler."

At Quincy, Ill., he told newsmen he was sorry the remarks gave listeners "the opposite impression" of what he had intended. Omaha radio station KOIL, which tape-recorded the Sparkman address in Council Bluffs' Baylis Park, rebroadcast part of the speech Monday.

Sparkman, in the tape-recorded speech, quoted Gen. Eisenhower as having said that "any official should be responsible for the infiltration of Communism under his direction." The Alabama senator then said he would not discuss the matter further, but added:

"... There are more cases in the files of the House un-American Activities Committee on Communist-front affiliations from Columbia University, of which he was President, than from any other school in the United States."

HOLDREGE, Neb. (INS)—Stanley A. Long, Democratic candidate for the U. S. Senate, repeated in Holdrege Monday night his charge that the Butler-Welsh Grain Co. sold

Long Raps Wheat 'Deal'

India at $5 a bushel.

Sen. Hugh Butler (R-Neb.), a partner in the grain company, termed Long's statement "a pure fabrication." It was first made Saturday night at West Point, Neb.

Long said at Holdrege he received the information two years ago from Butler's partner, LeRoy Welsh, during a University of Nebraska Board of Regents meeting. Both Long and Welsh were members of the board.

"That morning a story had appeared in the papers that President Truman had ruled that all wheat for foreign consumption must clear through the Commodity

"a slush fund" for Adlai Stevenson's presidential campaign.

In a statement put out by the GOP committee, Director Wayne Hood said:

"The fact that this meeting is being held at the White House indicates the complete subservience of Mr. Stevenson to Mr. Truman, who has been doing the major campaigning for the Democratic ticket."

A White House spokesman confirmed that a meeting to discuss campaign funds will be held at the White House Tuesday. But as to the Republican charge that the President is taking over the Democratic campaign, he said: "Nonsense."

"The Democrats are pretty short of funds, you know," the spokesman said, "and they have to talk about how to raise some more."

Brooks Says He Received Special Fund

ST. LOUIS (INS)—The St. Louis Post-Dispatch said Monday Republican National Committee-man C. Wayland Brooks told them he had received a special fund while serving as United States senator from Illinois.

Brooks, who served in the Senate from 1940 to 1946, said the payments were made by the Republican Citizens Finance Committee of Illinois. He told the Post-Dispatch he could not say how much he received, but that it was "considerably less than $1,000 a month."

Brooks, as GOP national committeeman, last month demanded the withdrawal of Gov. Adlai Stevenson from the presidential race after the disclosure that the Illinois governor maintained a special fund to augment salaries of key state officials.

The Illinois Republican said his special fund was used for "postage, printing and telegrams." He said at the time of his election there were only 18 Republicans in the senate and they received a large percentage of the senatorial mail.

U.S. Speaks Plainly To Czech Ambassador

Oatis Case Bars Good Relations

WASHINGTON (AP)—Czechoslovakia's new ambassador was told Monday that any improvement in relations between his Communist government and the United States depends on the release of William N. Oatis, imprisoned Associated Press correspondent.

The word was passed along to Dr. Karel Petrzek, the new envoy, when he paid a five-minute call on Undersecretary David K. Bruce at the State Department.

A department spokesman said Bruce "pointed out that he did not see how relations between the two countries could be improved as long as Oatis is held in prison."

Given 10-Year Sentence

Petrzka told reporters afterwards that whether Oatis is freed "depends on the Czechoslovak government." He did not elaborate on this remark.

A year ago last July 4 Oatis was sentenced in Prague to 10 years imprisonment on espionage charges. The Red court said five years of the sentence "will be suspended for good behavior."

The State Department has denounced Oatis' conviction as "a ludicrous travesty of justice" aimed at intimidating the free press of the world.

Farm Fire Causes $8,000 Damage

Fire, which destroyed a machine shed and corn crib, caused approximately $8,000 damages at the C. E. Lipe farm near Waverly Saturday evening.

The Lipes were at dinner and did not discover the fire until 7:30 p.m. No cause for the fire has been determined, according to Mrs. Lipe.

Destroyed by the fire were a 30 by 50 feet combination shed and crib, 900 bushels of 1952 corn, 300 bushels of oats from the new harvest, a truck, tractor, corn picker, and all tools stored in the shed.

Lincoln, Greenwood, and Waverly fire engines were credited by Lipe with saving nearby buildings—a garage, milk house, and dairy barn. Lipe's house was 150 feet from the burned building.

The loss is partially covered by insurance. No one was injured.

Nebraska Labor Convention Is Under Way

Union Men Urged To Cooperate

NORFOLK, Neb. (AP)—Scotts-bluff entered the first bid for the 1953 convention of the Nebraska Federation of Labor to come before the 1952 meeting of the group here.

Friends of Kenneth D. Lewis of Lincoln launched a campaign to name him secretary of the Federation, succeeding the late George F. Williams. Mrs. Williams has been handling the work since the death of her husband.

In an address to the convention Monday Walter W. King of Kansas City, regional director of the wages and hours and Public Contracts Division called on the delegates to "work together to return to the philosophy that made America great."

He urged the union men to work "to build respect for our public service on the understanding that our government is the one great national activity in which all citizens participate directly or indirectly and that we are all partners in this great enterprise."

"Let's distinguish facts about government from political issues and not allow campaign charges and counter-charges to shake our basic belief in the soundness of our governmental institutions and the career civil servants who man them."

"The eyes of the world are on us during this election year," he added. "This is our opportunity to demonstrate to the world that democracy is not a chaotic state of dissension and discord, but rather that the strength of true unity comes from the ability of free people to govern themselves."

King also commented that "If the citizens want to reduce federal expenditures the place to start is not with personnel but with functions. Take a look at the $1 billion dollar appropriation by Congress for services authorized by Congress. Find out what those services are," he said. "Decide whether or not you want them and tell your Congressman. If services are reduced personnel is reduced proportionately, but you cannot eliminate an appreciable number of employees without elimination of the work they are doing," he added.

MAXWELL ... leaving N.U. extension post.

LOERCH ... will succeed Earl Maxwell.

Popular Tree Planter Maxwell Retiring As Extension Forester

One of the most popular and effective Agricultural Extension workers at the University of Nebraska is going to retire early in 1953. He is Earl G. Maxwell, extension forester. Karl Loerch of Pierce will succeed him, it was announced at the university.

Widely known and respected throughout the state for his forestry work, Maxwell is a veteran extension worker. He has been largely responsible for the distribution of millions of Clarke-McNary trees to Nebraska farmers and ranchers and has been highly influential in tree planting activities throughout the Cornhusker state.

Maxwell is widely known as the "Hoosier Philosopher" because he is a native of Indiana. He graduated from Purdue University and later did graduate work at the University of Nebraska. He received his Master's degree from Nebraska.

Enthusiastic Maxwell came to the university in 1914. He served as Douglas County Extension Agent from 1918 to 1930 and for this past 18 years he has been in extension forestry work in Nebraska. Traveling the state constantly, Maxwell has earned an enviable reputation as an enthusiastic tree planter. He has assisted thousands of Nebraska farmers with their tree planting activities and has aided them in getting satisfactory tree plantings established and maintained.

Early Autumn Wedding News - From East To West

Introducing— Mrs. Louise Jennys and David

MRS. DEON WUNDERLICH

At an afternoon ceremony solemnized on Sunday, September 14, at the First Congregational church in Burwell, Miss Laura LaRue Nelson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo M. Nelson of Burwell, became the bride of Deon Wunderlich, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Wunderlich of Roca. Chrysanthemums in autumn tones decorated the altar, and the lines of the service were read by the Rev. E. K. Bauman in the presence of two hundred fifty guests.

Miss Carol Ann Pocock, organist, played the wedding music, and as the candles were lighted by Miss Pauline Hanson of Jamaica, Iowa, and Miss Janis Pocock of Ord, Mrs. William Garnick sang, "Ich Liebe Dich," and "Through The Years." She was accompanied by Miss Pauline Douglas.

The maid of honor was Miss Marlene Smith of Lincoln, who was frocked in copper-toned satin. Cap sleeves and decollete yoke fashioned the molded bodice, and the full skirt was danseuse-length. She carried yellow and bronze chrysanthemums. Wearing yellow gowns were the flower girls, Miss Jo Leen Wunderlich and Miss Judean Wunderlich, twin nieces of the bridegroom, and ring-bearer was Clare Wunderlich, nephew of the bridegroom.

Bridal satin in the deep ivory tone was chosen by the bride for her period gown. An off-shoulder yoke and long fitted sleeves of lace designed the torso bodice, and the circular waist-length skirt, was caught into back fullness. A braided bandeau of the satin held her short illusion veil, and she carried a colonial bouquet of ivory roses.

Edward B. Jeary of Lincoln, served Mr. Wunderlich as best man, and the ushers were Roland Cooksley of Broken Bow, and Wayne Foster of Bradshaw.

Following the reception, held at the church, Mr. and Mrs. Wunderlich left for a trip to the Black Hills, and are now residing on a farm near Roca. For her traveling costume, the bride wore a rose and navy tweed suit with navy blue accessories.

The bride is a former student at the University of Nebraska college of agriculture, and Mr.

HAD A LETTER from New York City the other day, and it contained two clippings — One of them was on the back of page 162, October 4 issue of the SEP — It's a picture of a beautiful blonde holding a bouquet of lilies, and it is an advertisement for diamonds — What is interesting about the reproduction of the painting used in the ad is the fact that the original had been done by Charles Rain, a former Lincoln resident who was graduated from Lincoln high school about 1930.

The letter told us that Mr. Rain opened his second one-man show at the Knoedler galleries (one of the top ones on Fifty-seventh street) on Sunday evening, September 28. The opening was an invitation affair, but the show runs through October 18. At the show, correspondent tells us, were several paintings that already had been sold by Mr. Rain, but which had been loaned by their owners — Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, III — Mrs. W. Vincent Astor, Mrs. Gerard B. Lambert (of the Listerine Lamberts) Julius K. Fleischman, and Otis Taylor — another former Nebraskan. There also are four paintings done for the DeBoers collection which appear in their advertisements for the famous diamonds. The first one was used October 4, and the other three are to follow.

We think you also might be interested in what a New York art critic says of Mr. Rain's show — so we're quoting — "VIRTUOSO: Painters who regard a high rate of productivity as the by-pass to Parnassus may not consider twenty paintings in five years a notable accomplishment, but Charles Rain's retrospective at Knoedler's contains work of such patient and prodigious virtuosity that one wonders how that was time enough. His blend of fact and fantasy, expressed in a cold, tight, meticulous manner, places him high among the magic realists. Like them he believes that the deliberate, improbable association of ordinary objects can start a train of thought that has nothing to do with them. With Rain, the mood induced is sentimental and tinged with an easily expendable melancholy. But it is really up to the beholder to ascribe the meaning that pleases him to these capricious, occasionally voguey, spick-and-span canvases. Loneliness and frustration do overhang the beach scene, but in "Daymare" Rain the image becomes too diffuse. For those who would rather leave meaning than take it there are some impeccable Italian visions. He is on surer ground here. Few artists can deal more efficiently with facts and even fewer can embellish them more elegantly."

WHILE DOING some verbal eastern travel we think now is the time to tell you that Robert Joyce of Wilmington, Del., is due to arrive in Lincoln Thursday evening — More specifically, Mr. Joyce's plane lands in Omaha where he will be met by his brother, Richard O. Joyce. We understand that Mr. Joyce has some business out in this neck of the woods, but the main objective is a few days of hunting at Red Deer.

SPEAKING OF hunting — Hear that Mr. and Mrs. George B. Cook have hunting guests at their Minnesota summer home at the moment — In this group are Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Holland and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Swanson — ready know, the wedding of Miss Ann Harrison of Washington, D. C., and Robert Garey, son of Mrs. L. F. Garey of Lincoln, will take place on Saturday, October 18, in Hastings — Going from Lincoln to attend the wedding, in addition to Mr. Garey's family, will be Mr. and Mrs. Edward Schwartzkopf and Mr. and Mrs. James Critchfield.

AS YOU PROBABLY al-

THE COLORADO-NEBRASKA game is not until week-end after next, but this morning we found some more Colorado game travelers — The feminine foursome includes Miss Helen Snyder, Miss Mayme Stukel, Miss Yleen Riehlard and Miss Margaret Collins who leave on Thursday evening, preceding the game, to drive to Boulder.

HEARD THAT the Franks — Mr. and Mrs. Arvid (Jean Minnick) and their family left during the week-end to return to their home in Buffalo, N. Y., after a brief visit with Mrs. Frank's mother, Mrs. E. B. Minnick, and her brother Gates Minnick.

Four year old David's expression leads one to believe that he resents being a model for a man-sized "Sindi" jacket, an Indian garment worn to village festivals. His reason may be that it is definitely not in keeping with his Hopalong Cassidy trousers! The jacket is only part of a fascinating collection Mrs. Jennys gathered during her five years as instructor of English at Kinnaird college in India.

Now teaching English II on the College of Agriculture campus, University of Nebraska, this charming woman has paused for a few years in her pursuit of a doctorate in literature toward which she has one year from the University of Kansas. After securing her B.A. degree in Lawrence, she obtained her Master's at Montana State college in Bozeman. A native of Kansas where her father was superintendent of the public schools, Jennys returned to K.U. to teach while deciding on her thesis.

During the five-year interim in what now is Pakistan, Mrs. Jennys taught at a private college for women, where, contrary to popular belief, she found the Indian students to be superior and quick to learn. During her stay there at the staff house sponsored by the Presbyterian mission board, many of her pupils were refugees and evacuees from all over Europe and Asia. Life was made even more glamorous due to the parties given by British diplomats and officers, and by American business personnel there. For the wardrobe one had to maintain for such festivities, Mrs. Jennys merely selected a picture from an American fashion magazine, bought the material, which might have been an English woolen or an Asiatic silk, and proceeded to take the whole works to her Indian tailor, who whipped together an ensemble that would have made Dior or Pauline Trigere take note! There was a definite undercurrent of hostility in India since the British troops remained in control of that section.

India is not completely poverty stricken by any means due to the steady rise of the merchant class. During the war, the English were forced to allow India to start factories of her own, and consequently the new-veu-riche are rapidly becoming a great part of the population.

Naturally, Mrs. Jennys did not spend five years eating Indian curries and similar concoctions without some Asiatic culinary knowledge rubbing off onto her! When she has the time and an appreciative audience, she prepares candy, pastries and custards for which one must boil milk almost all day! She hopes to return someday when David is a little older, but in the meantime we might be reading an enlightening thesis for a Ph.D. determining the influence of American or English literature on India, and we'll know who wrote it!

Minerva's Mail

Take Your Troubles To Minerva

One of the certain facts is that hindsight always is better than foresight. The things we should have done, and didn't, seem so simple when it is too late to do them. The saving of money, for instance, is a most difficult thing for most of us, and yet when we are almost totally without funds we can think of a dozen different ways we might have saved along the way. This is by no means a lecture on thrift—some people are born thrifty, others acquire the habit easily, but some of us have to learn through just plain, unhappy experiences, such as the lady of whom Aunt Mary speaks in the following letter:

Dear Minerva: Sometime ago, I talked with a woman who had just passed her 67th birthday. She said she was afraid of old age; she did not mind the gray hair and wrinkles, but she worried about what might happen to her if she couldn't take care of herself. She had no children or relatives who might be concerned about her, or to tell her what to do. She had seen some old people who had stayed alone in their homes until they had been found sick or dead, and she did not want that to happen to her. She thought people should plan for old age while they were still in the prime of life.

She hadn't done that, and now she didn't know what to do. She would like to go to an old people's home where she would have good care and have the cost reasonable. She had made some inquiries, but the homes were already filled, and each had a long waiting list. If she were on old age assistance, the Welfare Board would see to it that she had good care.

While she talked, I thought of some of the old people I have known. There was the old mother who was shunted from one place to another; the father who couldn't stay with any of his children; a bachelor who had no folks; a sister who had outlived her usefulness, and an old aunt whose relatives were more interested in her money than in her welfare. Old age is something that comes to everyone if they live long enough and I wonder if here isn't something that can be done to help the old folks who haven't anyone to care for them? Aunt Mary.

Simply Delicious!

Now that fresh cranberries are in season, why not use them often to add variety to your fall menus? They're chock full of good nutrition too, to add a plus in good meal planning. Fresh cranberries can be used in a main dish, as in a stuffed pork roast with spiced cranberry sauce. They can also add color and variety as a side dish in a good old-fashioned cranberry jelly. Fresh cranberries can also be used in making goodies for the youngsters. These bright red berries are delicious in cranberry-mincemeat bars—to be tucked away in school lunch boxes—or served as an after school snack with milk or hot chocolate.

Stuffed Pork With Spiced Cranberry Sauce

(Makes 6-8 servings)
4 cups fresh cranberries
1 cup fruit juice
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup honey
3-4 whole cloves
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
1 cup cubed apples
1 1/2 cups soft bread crumbs
1 teaspoon salt
1 small onion, minced
1/4 cup hot water
1 4-5 pound pork loin, with pocket

Combine cranberries, fruit juice, sugar, honey and spices in saucepan. Cook 10 minutes over medium heat. Combine remaining ingredients for stuffing pork pocket, plus 1 cup cranberry sauce. Toss lightly to mix. Fill pocket in pork loin. Place on rack in roasting pan. Roast in moderate oven 325°F. Allow 35-40 minutes per pound. About half hour before meat is done, drain grease from pan. Pour remaining sauce over meat. Continue roasting, basting two or three times.

Weiner Roast

Garfield School Community Center, District 113, held its first meeting of the year on Friday evening, October 10. Following a business meeting the remainder of the evening was devoted to a weiner roast.

Meals For Two

Have you ever pondered over your dinner menu thinking, "Gee, I wish I could think of a new way to fix potatoes!" Here are several new ways, we hope, to fix potatoes which should give your menus some of that often needed variety. They are taken from Louella G. Shouer's book, "Quick and Easy Meals For Two."

The recipe for California potatoes caught our eye and to prepare them, cook two cups of diced potatoes in one cup of salted water. When done, there should be very little liquid. Don't pour it off. Add two tablespoons of cream and two tablespoons of butter or margarine and season with salt and pepper. Toss over very low heat until the potatoes are coated with cream and butter or margarine.

Gilt-edged potatoes sounded good to us too. Rice freshly boiled and drained potatoes into a shallow casserole or an eight inch ovenproof pie dish, that is if you have a ricer. (If you haven't, mash potatoes with hot milk, butter, salt, and pepper and heap into a casserole.) Sprinkle with salt and pepper and dot with butter or margarine. Cover with three-fourths of a cup of grated American cheese and put into the oven with the meat you are baking. Leave in the oven long enough for cheese to melt and take on a golden tinge.

Learn The Wrap Art

By JOHN ROBERT POWERS

Good as a Jerry Lewis sketch—flying arms and gyrations—is the performance put on by many a charmer when she dons her coat. Look around you in any restaurant on any day and you can witness this spectacle. Once you become conscious of such violent awkwardness you're sure to start checking your own methods of getting into a coat. That's the moment when the following routine will be something you will want to practice until it becomes habit.

Models who are taxed with coat-donning before the eyes of fashion-show audiences make this technique their standard practice. You can count on it for graceful, poised results every time.

With your left hand, pick up a coat by the center of its collar band so that the coat clears the floor and the lining faces your body. Insert your right arm into its sleeve, gently adjust the coat's shoulder over your own and slide the neck band as far to the left as possible.

Letting go of the coat, bring your left hand to rest against your left shoulder. Now, using your right thumb and forefinger, firmly clasp the left side of the coat just below the shoulder seam and pull it outward to the left until fully extended.

With an arm motion similar to that used in the crawl stroke in swimming, raise your left elbow just enough to allow your fingers to slide into the sleeve. As they find their way down, adjust the shoulders.

You're in! And with no further adjustments other than closing. A fitted coat should be secured first at the waist, working up to the neck, and lastly from the waist down.

With just a bit of practice, your motions will begin to flow one into the other and the entire operation will take no more than a split second. The effect will be as smooth as that of a magician pulling a rabbit out of a hat. Since no one sees how the trick is done, admiration and applause are left in its wake!

Lands, Funds Board Abolishment Favored

New Agency Said Need

By ARCH DONOVAN
Star Staff Writer

Abolishment of the ex-officio board of educational lands and funds is recommended by a subcommittee of the Legislative Council in a report which seriously questioned the board's adequacy to handle the state school lands.

The board is headed by Gov. Val Peterson with other members Secretary of State James Pittenger, Treasurer Frank Heintze, Attorney General C. S. Beck and F. B. Decker, superintendent of public instruction.

The committee recommends a constitutional amendment to provide a different agency and for a manager of the educational endowments to be paid a salary comparable with that of other top administrative officials.

The committee was not in accord with some suggestions made at hearings that a land management firm be employed to administer the lands and held that they should be controlled by responsible public officials which led to the manager recommendation.

Auction Policy Favored

Policy of selling leases at public auction to preserve the integrity of the trust funds required by a Supreme Court decision holding invalid automatic renewal of leases was recommended to be continued.

The court also held invalid a portion of the statute which required payment of one-half of the consideration when owners resigned their leases and the repeal of this section was recommended. The committee also found unsatisfactory the system under which the land is appraised and said, "The practice of appraising lands at much less than their actual sale value is almost universal."

Provision for a manager was expected to correct this practice but the committee recommended that all land be appraised each time that it is leased or a reassignment is made and each three years thereafter. They also wanted the new appraised value to be made known at the time leases are offered for sale.

Urge More Appraisers

Employment of additional appraisers and personnel or use of a private appraisal firm was recommended. The committee also opposed changing the leasing formula of 6 per cent on the appraised value, pointing out that while it is higher than the going interest rates, the lessee escapes paying any taxes.

The committee opposed leaving the lease money for the schools in which the land is located, pointing out that the lands were intended to benefit the schools of the entire state and that when lands were sold in earlier years the money was not distributed to the counties in which located.

The committee said they had received criticism of the auction procedures due to the board accepting written bids after the auction closed and recommended that either the bidding be closed at the end of the auction or a new sale advertised.

The board adopted the policy of accepting written bids after the received evidence of intimidation of bidders by lease holders and their friends.

They recommend that lessees be required to obtain permission from the administering agency before making further permanent improvements and that appraisal of improvements be taken from county boards and a board named one by the owner, one by the new lessee and the third one mutually agreeable.

Sen. Robert McNutt of Lincoln was chairman of the committee with other members, Sens. John E. Beaver, Herbert J. Duis, William Moulton, Otto J. Prohs and H. G. Wellensiek.

Casey Inks Two-Season 100-G Pact

Now Highest-Paid Pilot In History Of Baseball

By WILL GRIMSLEY
NEW YORK (AP)—Casey Stengel signed a new two-year contract to manage the New York Yankees Monday and, with a sly wink, hinted that his salary will hit $100,000 a year.

This would make him the highest paid pilot in the history of baseball.

Neither the Yankees nor Stengel announced flatly how much money the wrinkled diamond genius would make but Casey let the cat out of the bag in a lengthy press conference following the ceremony.

"If you guess $75,000 you're low," the 62-year-old pilot said under heated questioning.

"Will it be $100,000 counting bonuses and any other arrangement?" a reporter asked.

"Well," said Casey, his face breaking into a wide grin. "It shouldn't miss."

Stengel, who recently led the Yankees to their fourth straight World Championship to share that record feat with Joe McCarthy, signed the new papers at special ceremonies in the club's swank Fifth Avenue offices.

He was flanked by co-owner Dan Topping, and General Manager George Weiss.

Under the terms of the last agreement, Stengel received $60,000 a year.

Because of his age and health, there had been rumors the busy little master of the hunch might call it quits after this year. But Casey quickly spiced such talk after beating the Brooklyn Dodgers in the seventh game of the World Series last week.

"My boys don't quit on me and I won't quit on them," he announced. "I have no intention of retiring."

Stengel refused to take seriously the acclaim surrounding his fourth straight World Series Championship, matching the Yankees' string under McCarthy from 1936 through 1939.

"Four straight?" said Casey. "That won't last long. A man will have to win seven or eight straight to be remembered."

Stengel came to the Yankees in 1949 from Oakland, Calif., where he managed his home town club of the Pacific Coast League from 1946 to 1948.

By PAUL ZIMMERMAN
SPORTS EDITOR, LOS ANGELES TIMES
DID you read where President John A. Hannah of Michigan State stated the other day that the moves of the American Council on Education are beyond the comprehension of the sports reader?

How right he is. But it isn't quite like the president said. What the average reader doesn't savvy is how Dr. Hannah can preach de-emphasis on the one hand while overemphasizing his own university on the other.

If you haven't looked lately, his Michigan State football team, after being rated No. 2 in the country a year ago, is currently listed No. 1 in the nation.

Now the good doctor may think that proves nothing, but to the sports readers—and you can't fool 'em, doc—it means there is quite a program of gridiron emphasis going on at East Lansing these days.

Dr. Hannah said if he had his way about it, the story of the council's program would be presented in the general news sections. He implied there that the average reader of the general news has a higher IQ than you folks who delight in reading about touchdowns, base hits, left hooks and such. Of course, there is no newspaper reader survey that proves this.

In other words, the president of Michigan State is talking down to the lowly yokels who write for and those who read sports sections.

If President Hannah means that we are a little stupid because there was no great public uprising to join the ranks of the presidents when they decided eliminating bowl games and spring practice was the first step toward de-emphasis, he still has missed his target.

HE has yet to prove to the low-brow sports reader that four major postseason bowl games caused the overemphasis that all of a sudden disturbed the minds of the presidents. Neither has any ACE member been able to conclusively state that spring practice is the cause.

Our East Lansing oracle also sets forth that the sports editors ignored the cleanup campaign of the presidents because it is "dull stuff."

Taint so, doctor. Sports writers discovered and wrote about overemphasis in football a long time before you got Michigan State up there among the nation's leaders.

Why, Dr. Hannah, they were even discussing it before Fritz Crisler's Michigans were giving you Spartans such lumps you decided something should be done about it.

The Michigan State president, who prides himself in the fact that he seldom misses a game, either at home or abroad, thinks that where mere sports reporters have fallen down is in not recording the "dull stuff."

This, the gentleman from East Lansing asserts, consists of "talks of credits and normal progress toward graduation, etc."

WHERE ties in with with spring practice and bowl games is hard to see. That statement may, of course, prove Dr. Hannah's first point.

Probably our stupidity arises from the fact that we thought all college presidents were seeing it to that athletes got the same credits for the same courses as other students.

We had likewise assumed that football players these days were progressing to normal graduation like everyone else.

These suspicions of ours were based on the belief that it was the business of college presidents to see to it that that was done.

In the early days of the game there were plenty of cases where college grid stars never cracked a book, or seldom went to class. It was only logical that they didn't quite make it to the cap and gown stage of scholastic success.

We had heard the yarn—we thought it was just a gag—about the school that had carried the platoon system one step farther. That was where the coach had, in addition to the offensive and defensive groups, a platoon that went to class for the rest. Maybe Dr. Hannah knows better.

It had been our thought the chief problem of football overemphasis was that of too much recruiting and subsidizing—brought on by earning too much money in gate receipts.

P.S.—Please pardon our ignorance, doctor.

Cincinnati Reds Add Four Minor Leaguers

CINCINNATI (AP)—The Cincinnati Reds announced Monday they have added four minor league players to their roster.

They are: Leon Foulk, Ivan Johannes and Cliff Ross, pitchers, and Jim Bolger, outfielder.

Foulk was bought from Tulsa in the Texas League. Johannes comes from Burlington in the Three-I circuit. Ross was obtained from Ogden in the Pioneer League and Bolger was acquired from Buffalo in the International League.

The operating budget represents an increase of $2,000 over the last year. The money is used, among other things, to defray expenses of various committees.

The TV assessment against schools whose football teams are televised on the national NCAA program was reduced because no special surveys are being made such as last year. A special survey on attendance relationship in regard to television in 1951 cost the NCAA $55,000.

The NCAA Council policy directing body, will meet Tuesday to hear a report on post season competition by the extra events committee.

This group was set up to determine the pressures, if any, that may lead to flagrant recruiting practices by post-season competition. Football bowl games are mainly involved.

Pete Janetos Reports:

Run And Pass—Penn State Does Both Well

By NORRIS ANDERSON
Sports Editor, The Star
PETER JANETOS, gentleman and scholar and scout for the Nebraska Cornhuskers, Monday warned Penn State running and passing.

Pete saw the unbeaten Husker foe of Saturday defeat William and Mary and West Virginia.

"They piled up 70 points in those two games," commented Janetos. "They can run and pass and they have the manpower to wear down the other team in the late stages of the game."

Penn State has no individual standouts except Quarterback Tony Rados or End Jesse Arnette, Janetos said.

"They operate largely as a team. They will try first to beat you by running and, if that doesn't work, they'll try to pass." It is the aerial end where Rados and Arnette shine.

Rados, who Janetos describes as a "smart field general," hit 14 of 23 passes as the Lions whipped West Virginia 35-21, Saturday.

Arnette, 6-5 and 228 pounds, who is also star of the Penn State basketball team, excels in both receiving and defending.

"He is even dangerous on end-around plays," added Janetos. Penn State uses the split-T formation and employs a 5-4-2 defense against the straight-T and a 5-3-3 against the spread.

Huskers who saw heavy duty against Kansas State worked in sweat togs Monday. Remainder of the squad engaged in a scrimmage.

As top candidates for the left halfback spot, vacated permanently by the injured Bobby Reynolds, Glassford named Jim Cederdahl, Bill Thayer and Dierks Roiston—in that order. They are sophomores.

The right halfback brigade, led by Sophomore Bob Smith, is backed by Dennis Korinek and George Gohde.

Gohde was shifted over from the fullback group. Glassford explained that both the right and left halfbacks were schooled to assume either position.

Despite the heavy stretcher duty (mostly for K-Staters), the Huskers came out of Saturday's game in fair physical shape. Only Guard Jerry Paulson (shoulder injury) is a doubtful participant against Penn State.

George Prochaska, senior guard from Ulysses, returned to active duty along with Center Bob Oberlin. Both have been out with injuries.

Huskers 'Played Hard' Against Kansas State, Says Glassford

By The Star Sports Editor
"OUR boys played as hard as they could against Kansas State Saturday," Coach J. William Glassford told the University Club Quarterbacks Monday noon.

"Kansas State and Iowa State have always been very tough for us. Kansas State put up a great effort and had us defended well."

The Husker coach thought that a clipping penalty and a dropped pass kept his men from pacing, 27-7, at halftime instead of 14-7.

Nebraska, he said, didn't take "full advantage of running to the outside."

He said the Huskers turned to the spread formation when "Kansas State appeared to be laying too far inside."

Glassford said he used five different defenses including one in the last quarter where the line-backers were directly behind the ends.

Three mistakes cost the Huskers at least 100 of the 204 yards they yielded to Wildcat passing, Glassford said.

"Otherwise, all of those short passes didn't hurt us too much," he added, saying that he was not too discouraged over the pass defense.

Glassford, after studying movies described the play that caused Bobby Reynolds' shoulder separation and removal from football for the season thus: "Bobby was tackled by one man. As he was falling, another man tackled him. As he hit the ground, two more fell on him, driving his arm into the ground."

He complimented the fine end play of Bill Schabacker, who had just recovered from a virus infection.

Looking ahead to the remaining six games, Glassford said: "We are now at the crossroads and more road is getting longer and more narrow each week."

"How well we will do depend on how we stay 'up' and how much our overall offense and defense improves."

"I'm sure you will all be proud of the squad's efforts. They will walk off the field after every game with their heads high."

He mentioned the impressive Saturday victories of Kansas, Oklahoma and Minnesota — three of the remaining six foes.

As to the Saturday game with Penn State, he said: "We are both unbeaten and someone has to make that important turn."

The Quarterbacks heard a report by Scout Pete Janetos on Penn State.

John Lawlor introduced the speakers and the special guest, Dwight Griswold, former governor of Nebraska.

Dick Cordell Sold To Columbus, Ga., By Omaha Cards

OMAHA (INS)—The Omaha Cardinals Monday announced that Outfielder Dick Cordell and Pitcher Bobby Slaybaugh have been sold to the St. Louis Cardinals' Columbus, Ga., farm club.

Cordell is a native of Lincoln, where he played baseball at Lincoln High School. He is presently attending the University of Nebraska.

In other deals, the Cards sent Outfielder-Third Baseman Eddie Phillips and Pitchers Gary Blalock and Gerry Mertz to Houston, Tex., in exchange for Outfielder Eddie Sanicki and an undisclosed amount of cash.

Phillips' .320 batting average won him the 1952 Western League batting championship. Blalock won 13 and lost nine games for an earned run average of 3.20.

Mertz also won 13 for Omaha while losing 11. His earned run average was 3.47.

The Cards also announced that Southpaw Walt Montgomery has been traded to Columbus, O., for Pitcher Danny Lewandowski and cash. Montgomery tied with Alberto Osorio of Denver for most shut-out games pitched, at six apiece.

UPSETS or near defeats raised havoc with the Class B and C ratings this week, but after a heavy shuffling the Broken Bow Indians were still atop the Class B ratings while Grant reigns as the new Class C king.

Western grid powers loom as the chief contenders for the honors in both classes as the majority of the teams move into their last half of the season.

Trailing the Indians in the Class B runnerup spot is Cozad with a 26-0 verdict over Gothenburg last week. The Haymakers now have four wins and a lone loss for the season while the Indians made it four straight last week although getting a big scare from the Holdrege Dusters.

Gering, with five straight victories, retained its third place berth after disposing of Torrington, Wyo., 24-7. The David City Scouts also rang up win number five by blasting Albion, 24-6, and stepped up to fourth from sixth place.

York served notice of being a rough customer in games to come by blasting Aurora, 31-6. The Dukes are holding down the fifth place spot that was held by Blair last week. Blair barely edged Wahoo, 13-12, and fell to seventh.

Tekamah, in sixth place, all but wrapped up the Cornhusker Conference title last week by setting down Valley, 20-12. It was the fifth win of the season for the Tigers.

Holy Name, although having to go all out to nip a tough Lincoln Cathedral eleven, 14-2, retained its eighth place hold. Sidney stepped up a notch to ninth place by stomping Gordon, 59-7, and Wayne, suffering its first defeat of the season, a 16-7 spanking by Stanton, fell from fourth place to tenth.

While moving to the top of the Class C pack after thumping Wauwata, 35-0, Grant holds a shaky nod over three top challengers—Oskosh, Rushville and Pender.

Oskosh stepped into the runnerup after stopping Minatare, 32-0, for its fifth win.

Boasting the highest scoring club in Class C, Rushville slipped to third place from the runnerup spot although knocking Bassett, 32-7. Rushville has rolled to 187 points in four games while holding its opponents to 14.

The Pender Pandrags, the new fourth place team, had their goal line crossed for the first time this season in licking Wakefield, 39-7.

A scrappy Friend eleven moved into the top ten for the first time this season after bowling over the highly regarded Geneva Wildcats, 13-7.

Battle Creek, winner of the Corn Belt Conference crown, rolled to its 20th straight win by thumping Pilger, 28-7, to take over the sixth place berth.

Cambridge put its winning string on the block last week and it chopped off by Class B Minden, 32-0. While not considered an upset, the margin of defeat knocked the Trojans from the top spot that they had occupied since the opening day of the 1952 season.

Franklin, another newcomer to the top ten, kept its slate clean by blanking Beaver City, 14-0, and is the new tenth place club.

Dodd Calls For Tight Grid Rules

ATLANTA (INS)—Bobby Dodd, head coach of Georgia Tech, Monday called for tight enforcement of football eligibility rules and for elimination of all gambling on sporting events.

Dodd, whose Tech Yellow Jackets are currently rated one of the top football teams of the nation, told the Atlanta Touchdown Club he thought the Southeastern Conference should have "an independent and fearless commission" who will rule with an iron hand and will not have to be beholden to anyone.

He added he thought SEC Commissioner Bernie Moore was "doing a good job. Dodd explained: "Being paid by the schools and subject to their displeasure, prevents him from being as stern as he should be in many cases."

Dodd said that strict enforcement of all rules "would soon have the colleges in line."

The Georgia Tech coach said he did not think de-emphasis, tried by a few individual schools, would work. He predicted too that conferences which have banned bowl games "will change their minds."

Dodd conceded, however, that a system should be devised to make it impossible for a bowl team to "buy a new team with the proceeds."

"Gambling on sports should not be allowed in any form," Dodd said. He explained: "When a man loses his money he complains and becomes unreasonable. More coaches lose their jobs because of others gambling on games than for any other reason."

Pro Redskins Release Ed Bagdon, Sam Venuto

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Washington Redskins of the National Football League Monday released Guard Ed Bagdon and Fullback Sam Venuto.

At the same time the Redskins signed Fullback Jack Cloud, formerly with the Green Bay Packers. The Redskins also placed Tackle Lou Karras on the reserve list.

Interval Between Tough Games Finds Local Preppers Resting

THINGS were almost serene around local high school drill-yrays Monday as three schools recuperating from hard tilts last Friday participated in light workouts.

At Lincoln High gridgers worked out on the blocking sleds and dummy mules and added wind sprints, foregoing their usual Monday diet of scrimmage.

Said Coach Bill Pfeiff in commenting on Friday's rough encounter with Scottbluff: "We've sort of got to fall back and regroup, recover our edge." He added that LeRoy Butchers, whose nose was broken Friday, won't be handicapped by the injury.

They Links will face Omaha North with the same club that was on hand last week. Still out with knee injuries are Tackle Dick Dinges and Center Mike Edwards.

Northeast Mentor Ben Galloway said that his Rockets followed the usual Monday procedure consisting of work on fundamentals, drills and wind sprints, foregoing workouts in preparation for this week's meeting with Omaha South.

The Packers won their first game Friday, dumping Omaha Central, 28-6, and displaying a hard-charging offensive which could present a real challenge to the Rockets, Galloway said.

Northeast is still without the services of Ron Steele, speedy halfback injured in the Lincoln game. Also on the injured list is Back Rich Taylor, with a fractured wrist bone.

Cathedral and College View, slated to meet Thursday in a revival of a long-standing football rivalry, were concentrating on defensive measures.

The Bluebirds, 14-2 victims of Omaha Holy Name in another hard-fought battle, took things easy Monday and will get their only heavy work prior to the game out of the way today.

Cathedral Coach Vince Aldrich, who was well-satisfied with the way his charges performed against the husky Ramblers, was reported concentrating on a way to stop College View's spread formation, which the Viewmen have worked with success against each of their opponents this season.

College View Coach Tom Gillespie, whose club enjoyed an open date last week, was organizing defenses against the Bluebirds' split T and counting on an extra week's rest to give his players an edge over their Homecoming foe. With neither team deep in talent, the contest could easily become one of stamina and conditioning.

NCAA Group Slices Television Assessments

CHICAGO (AP)—The NCAA Executive Committee Monday recommended a $104,000 general operating budget for next year and the slicing of television assessments from 18 to 12 per cent in a routine meeting that opened a four-day parley.

The operating budget represents an increase of $2,000 over the last year. The money is used, among other things, to defray expenses of various committees.

The TV assessment against schools whose football teams are televised on the national NCAA program was reduced because no special surveys are being made such as last year. A special survey on attendance relationship in regard to television in 1951 cost the NCAA $55,000.

The NCAA Council policy directing body, will meet Tuesday to hear a report on post season competition by the extra events committee.

This group was set up to determine the pressures, if any, that may lead to flagrant recruiting practices by post-season competition. Football bowl games are mainly involved.

Gagne, Great Togo Tonight's Wrestle Card Luminaries

Two grapplers of major importance on the national wrestling scene are slated to show their wares here tonight in a double-feature card at the Fairgrounds arena.

Verne Gagne, perhaps the foremost contender for the title owned by Heavyweight Champion Lou Thesz—who appeared here last week—faces Joltin' Joe Dusek, the wily Omahan, who treats neither the rules nor his opponent with respect.

The Great Togo, Japan's top-flight mat artist, will face Mike DeBlase, one-time Husker gridder and now a veteran of grunt and groan warfare.

The first of the two double main event matches will run under a 90-minute limitation while the second is a 60-minute affair. Both will go two falls out of three.

In the semiwindup, which gets the evening under way at 8:30, Bill Melby, who once cavorted in University of Utah mole skins, meets Gene Reardon of Kansas City in a 45-minute two-out-of-three.

HERE TONIGHT—Verne Gagne, termed by many as the logical contender for the heavyweight wrestling crown now held by Lou Thesz, faces Joe Dusek of Omaha at the Fairgrounds tonight.

Wes Hultquist Continues Pace Plainsman Offensive

Glenn Reed, Marv Macy Crowd Methodist Flash

ANOTHER amazing exhibition by Wesley Hultquist stood out in Nebraska Wesleyan's 7-27 loss to Peru State Friday night.

Hultquist personally accounted for 104 rushing yards in 10 attempts for a 10.4 try average and completed four out of eight passing attempts for 31 more; punted five times for a 40.2 average despite an out-of-bounds boot early in the game which travelled but 13 yards and scored the Plainsmen's lone touchdown and conversion after personally setting up the score with a 67-yard burst.

Thus Hultquist continues to dominate the Wesleyan statistical picture, hard pressed by freshmen Glenn Reed and Marv Macy, who, too, have been outstanding on offense.

Looking at the offensive statistics, one would hardly guess that the Plainsmen are a team who have dropped four out of five starts this season, giving up 98 points while earning 69 for themselves.

The Plainsmen have earned 67 first downs to 65 for their foes. They own a net offensive gain of 1536 yards to 1455 for opponents and have averaged 4.1 per try in 243 rushing attempts to 3.9 for opponents in 258 tries.

In individual statistics, Hultquist dominates every department except passing where Macy has completed 22 out of 36 attempts for 278 yards. Hultquist has powered his way to a total of 558 yards in total offense for an average gain per game of 111 plus.

Yanks Release Charley Keller

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York Yankees handed Charley Keller, 36-year-old former star outfielder, his unconditional release Monday.

Keller, signed as a free agent on Sept. 4, struck out in his only time at bat this season.

The husky flycatcher was a prominent member of the Yankees' pennant winning teams of 1939, 1941, 1942, 1943. Keller spent the 1944 season in the Merchant Marine. He returned in 1945 and remained with the Yanks through 1949.

He was released unconditionally during the winter of 1949, but the Detroit Tigers signed him. He was released by the Tigers after the 1951 campaign and remained out of baseball until signed by the Yanks during the stretch run in the 1952 race.

Keller wound up with a lifetime batting average of .286 and 189 home runs. He hit .306 in the four World Series he appeared in.

Marciano Cops September Pro Athlete Award

NEW YORK (AP)—Heavyweight Champion Rocky Marciano Monday was named September winner of the Hickok Pro Athlete of the Year Poll.

Robin Roberts, the Phillies' great pitcher who won 28 games, was second, and the Yanks' Allie Reynolds was third.

Midget Grid Season Ends Sunday

Five Sportsman Trophy At Stake

By RON GIBSON
Star Sports Staff Member

ALTHOUGH the 1952 Lincoln Star Sportsman trophy is decided, another important race is yet to be won.

The Downtown Merchants, who finished last in 1951, won the title and the right to represent Lincoln in the Omaha Invitational Tournament after the season when Roberts Dairy, previously winless, upset South Street Sunday to knock the Southsiders from title contention.

But the Dosek Sportsman trophy, to be given for the first time this year, is still being contested and all four teams have a good chance to win the big cup.

The award is given to the team with the highest sportsman rating for the season. Each Sunday throughout the season, all teams were rated on sportsman-ship by special judges selected by Midget Football Commissioner Bill Inbody and Jaycee Representative Dr. Ken Jones.

At present, the Roberts Dairy eleven holds a slim edge in the Dosek Trophy standings. The Red-shirts have a 286 total, just barely ahead of South Street's 278. Northeast follows with a 274, and Downtown has 270.

Romack And Smith Pace Gal Golfers

FT. SMITH, Ark. (AP)—Barbara Romack of Sacramento, Calif., and Marilyn Smith of Wichita, Kans., shared medalist honors with low qualifying scores of 76 Monday at the eighth annual Hardscrabble Invitational Golf Tourney for women.

Betty Jameson of San Antonio, Tex., cut the winners' margin with a 77, two over women's par for the Hardscrabble Country Club course. Defending Champion Miss Mary Lena Faulk of Thomasville, Ga., shot 79.

Fifty-nine women, shooting over a comparatively slow course hampered by dry greens, participated in the qualifying rounds.

Big Seven Survey Shows Satisfaction, Injuries

Oklahoma Got All The Breaks—Wilkinson

By The Associated Press
OKLAHOMA CITY — The ball bounced right and Oklahoma got all the breaks—that's Coach Bud Wilkinson's explanation of his Sooners' 49-20 runaway over Texas last Saturday.

Wilkinson told the Monday Quarterbacks Club "Everything was great. We got all the breaks but I just wish we could have saved some for when we need them."

Wilkinson said the turning point in the game came just before the half when Texas, behind 28-7, was held on downs at the Sooners' 7-yard line.

"If Texas had scored then, it would have given us a two-touchdown lead and Texas would have had a great moral boost."

Wilkinson praised the play of Quarterback Eddie Crowder and Fullback Buck McPhail, who had Texas players and spectators fooled with their hocus-pocus.

Oklahoma meets Kansas in an important Big Seven Conference game Saturday at Lawrence and Wilkinson pointed to a prediction he made before the season started.

"I said Kansas would be equal to or better than any team we meet this year and I certainly haven't changed my mind," he said.

Five key players, injured in Saturday's Texas game, may see only limited action against Kansas this week, Wilkinson disclosed.

He said J. D. Roberts, defensive guard; Larry Grigg, safety man; Ends John Redell and Max Boydston, and Star Fullback Buck McPhail were benched for Monday's workout.

Roger Nelson, who did not play at Dallas, was still wearing a cast around a sprained elbow and is considered a doubtful starter at Lawrence.

The remainder of the squad limbered up, then scrimmaged freshmen briefly.

Wildcats Are Decimated
MANHATTAN, Kan.—An even dozen men were on the injury list when the Kansas State football team reported for a light workout Monday afternoon.

Three of them have knee injuries and will not be able to play in Saturday's game against Tulsa University at Tulsa. They are Ends Jack McShulskis and Ken Barr and Tackle Larry Hartshorn.

Three others have injuries which may keep them out of action. Linebacker Dennis Kane has a head injury; Linebacker E. Pence has a broken rib, and Tackle Earl Meyer has a broken finger and a severely strained neck.

The other six are nursing bruises but are expected to be in shape for Tulsa.

Coach Bill Meek said he was pleased with the team's performance against Nebraska last week.

Bufs In Top Shape

BOULDER, Colo.—Coach Dal Ward said Monday his Colorado football team was in the best physical shape of the entire season.

Ward said only two players, Guard Dick Knowlton and Back Ronnie Johnson, are on the doubtful list for starting against Iowa State at Ames next Saturday.

The Colorado coach said he wanted two things out of the Arizona game last Saturday and got them both: No. 1, a victory; No. 2, no more injuries.

The team suited up for a half-hour workout Monday. Heavy duty is slated Tuesday.

Jays Drill For Sooners

LAWRENCE, Kan.—Coach Jules Sikes, readying his charges for the tough clash with mighty Oklahoma Saturday, put his University of Kansas gridders through light offensive and defensive signal drills Monday.

Physically, the Jayhawkers appeared in good shape. Three men—all regulars—were nursing injuries but all are expected to be available Saturday. They are End Jerry Taylor, who received a broken nose in the Iowa State game; Fullback Frank Sabatini and Center Warren Woody, both with knee injuries.

Cyclones Escape Injury

AMES—The Iowa State College football squad should be in better shape injury-wise than it has been all season when the Cyclones host Colorado here Saturday.

Coach Abe Stuber learned

Monday that no major injuries were suffered last Saturday against Kansas and that half a dozen previously injured players will return this week.

Tigers Add Tricks

COLUMBIA, Mo.—The University of Missouri football squad limbered up a little Monday to get rid of the kinks acquired last Saturday against Southern Methodist, and put some new tricks in its offense and defense for use against Oklahoma A. & M. at Stillwater this week.

The Tiger B squad, however had heavier work in preparation for a busy weekend. The Bengal reserves are scheduled twice this week—Thursday night against the Springfield Teachers at Springfield and Saturday afternoon against the Kirksville Teachers at Kirksville.

Bantam Ring Title

On Block Nov. 8

JOHANNESBURG (AP)—The world bantamweight title fight between Champion Vic Towel of South Africa and Jimm Carruthers of Australia will take place on Nov. 8, it was announced Monday.

The bout was postponed from Oct. 4 because of Towel's eye trouble. The South African champion now has recovered and there is no danger of another delay.

Giants Acquire Hiller

From Cincinnati Reds

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York Giants announced Monday they had obtained Frank Hiller, a right-handed pitcher, from the Cincinnati Reds in exchange for outfielder Gail Henley, who played the past season with Tulsa in the Texas League.

Look what a FEW EXTRA DOLLARS will buy

We'll be the first to admit that you can buy a car for less than the price of a Buick. But not so much less as most people think.

And just to save those few extra dollars, you'll miss a fortune in fun.

For the few extra dollars you pay for a Buick, you get the ginger and thrill of a lot more power than you'll get in any other car of its price and pounds—plus the big miles-per-gallon figures of Buick's famed high-compression Fireball 8 Engine.

You get size and room and looks to do you proud—comfort you'll hardly believe—and that good sense of security that only ample weight can impart.

You get the all-coil-spring ride that a million dollars couldn't duplicate. You get handling, steering, braking, turning—all with an ease that women especially appreciate.

We could go on at length about a lot of other things, including a fair-sized list of items you get in every Buick but which cost extra on lesser cars.

But why go on? The fun and fine feeling and wondrous comfort you enjoy in a Buick are things you shouldn't be missing for just a few extra dollars. And the value—you just can't pass that up.

Got a little time to drop in and let us prove our points?
